Rhode Island Fruit Growers Association

The Rhode Island Fruit Growers Association began in 1913 with a group of dedicated apple orchardists from Providence and Kent Counties. Over the years, RIFGA has expanded to include growers of many tree fruits as well as grapes and berries.

Throughout the season our members have the support and assistance from URI and UMASS Cooperative Extensions. Their continuous research and ongoing fieldwork aid and advance our farmer's ability to produce healthy, savory fruit.

There are now more than 1200 commercial farms in Rhode Island, and this number continues to rise as interest in local agriculture increases. Today, the RIFGA continues traditions started a century ago.
